TO MY MANY FRIENDS

There is an ancient superstition that swans sing before they die, but no one has ever heard one of these birds sing. And at least one poet has opined that it were no bad thing if some swans should die before they sing. This is no swan song. Neither is it a farewell speech.

For forty-five years I have met pupils of this school in my classes and tried to help them to learn many things that are useful in the business of living. I realize that I have often gone outside the text and the subject at hand. I have never hesitated to talk about matters that seemed to me important as related to general education.

It is pleasant to think of courtesies extended freely and often, of consideration granted constantly, of friendly smiles day by day. These things have been given out of kindness and self respect, for my associates are men and women of humane culture. But they do not wish me to thank them in a formal way. Neither do I need to thank the school committee for numerous salary checks promptly cashed and duly appreciated. I believe I have earned them.

Once in a while a curious question arises in the back of my mind. It is a question that quickly fades out. Have I been a good teacher? Some of my pupils, past and present, will answer this in the affirmative, perhaps with mental reservations. Others may answer it in the negative, with hesitation. Possibly I have not been a teacher at all, in the strict sense of the term. Perhaps I have been more of a guide, or friend.

What have I learned, myself? O, many things, as we all do. I have learned that the most precious possession a man can acquire is a little child. I have learned that one must have an interest for leisure hours. I have found beauty an anodyne and an inspiration. In the evening sky, in the flower of the field, in music, in art, in the heart of a friend, as Longfellow said, it is all about us. I wish I had gathered more of it.

What have I missed in life? O, many things, as we all must. Sometimes, ambitions unfulfilled cause me keen regret. But I value the privilege of spending many years with young people and teachers whose very presence is an inspiration. Life is filled with unrealized hopes balanced by compensations.

Philosophy? Young people do not need it, and much of it is not good for men and women moving toward three score years and ten. I do not demand an explanation of the beginning or the end of things. Indeed, I have a hearty doubt about the existence of such limitations. Except ye become as a little child, ye cannot enter.

I AM AN AMERICAN

ROBERT H. FARRAR

Thank God, I am American born and bred,
And not by a daft dictator led . . .
Deceived by acts that are palpably wrong,
No mercy given to the weak by the strong.

Thank God, I am American born and bred,
And not on lying propaganda fed;
My rights guaranteed by the Constitution,
I fear no raging, lunatic revolution.

Hence, iron Rule and fiendish Fate
Of creatures in a totalitarian state!
No curse for me of cruel ban,
Thank God I am an American!

Class History

In September, 1935, curious, bewildered, and expectant, we entered upon the first year of high school life. We chose Floyd Santos to lead us over the rough spots with Jean VanCampen to assist him, David Marsden as secretary, and Clara Tetlow as treasurer. After the excitement of the elections had subsided, the first drill of the year took place. It was a gala affair with the boys in becoming uniforms and the girls in colorful gowns! This event was followed by our first real stumbling block—midyears. We trembled at the thought of them but survived the ordeal to see the last half of the year speed swiftly past.

We decided to retain the officers of the preceding year for the second lap of our journey and then proceeded to enroll in the various school clubs. The year tripped placidly along and the football season closed with a gay "Pigskin Matinee". The speeches of the football squad and the athletic members of the faculty gave zest to the party. The play, "Christmas Is For Children", put on by the Dramatic Club, was another interesting high spot of the year.

Our junior year we elected Floyd Santos president once more, Joseph MacDonald vice-president, Pauline Rogers secretary, and Walter Wood, treasurer. At last we were getting on in the school world! We had a jolly junior prom and our nicknames of "Freshies" and "Silly Sophs" passed out of existence.

Finally we reached the dignified position of the senior class with Jean VanCampen president, Mary Butler vice-president, Barbara Hayward secretary, and Robert Eames treasurer. Now it was our turn to play big brother and big sister to the underclassmen. All too soon came our last midyears, last drill, our picture-posing, our elaborate prom, and impressive graduation. It is all over—those four years of work, play, laughter, and tears. May we meet life's trials with the same courage and energy which have enabled us to make the grade during these four happy high school years.

Class Will

We, the class of nineteen hundred and thirty-nine, of Taunton High School, in the City of Taunton, State of Massachusetts, do hereby publish this our last will and testament in the manner and form following:

To Mr. Ward and the faculty, our sincere appreciation for their tireless work in our behalf during our four years in high school.

EVELYN BOLSTER: To any junior, my front seat in 101 with the warning that silence is golden when Miss Maxcy is in the room.

MARY BORRA: To Barbara Henshall, my mythology scrap book, if it isn't too heavy, and my absent-mindedness to any junior who desires it.

JAMES BOWERS: To Walter Black, my position as Mr. McManus' most talkative homeroom pupil.

VIRGINIA BRAZIL: To "Buddy" Silva, '41, my passionate love for French to make his path through M. Fogg less difficult, with a heartfelt regret that I cannot bequeath him something more tangible—a trot, for instance.

ROBERT BRINDLE and JOSEPH BURKE: To any two juniors, our positions as ticket collectors at the basketball games.

STEPHANIE BURY: To a domestic junior, the pleasure of serving Miss Stone a half cup of coffee in the lunchroom every day.

MARY BUTLER: To the future secretary of the Student Council, a scooter to answer Mr. McManus' frequent calls.

NORMA CARR: To the teachers of Taunton High, I leave Ray, the last in the train of "Carrs". Handle with care!

LILLIAN DeLAURA: To Ethel Morey, my lunch-time study habits.

KATHLEEN FLYNN: To Bill Rasmussen, the recipe for boiling a three-minute egg.

DOROTHY GALLIGAN: To anyone who wants it, my ability to look intelligent when I don't know the answers.

WARREN HACKETT: To Dr. Carroll, one pair of overalls to keep his suit free from chalk.

RUTH HOYE: To the next Journal Editor, the forethought to ask for a stiff cover before it is too late.

RONALD LApensee: To any musical junior, one arch-supporter for "The Flat-Foot Floogy," one room for the "Two Sleepy People," one algebra text, alias "You're a Sweet Little Headache," also an "A" in an English test, otherwise known as "It Can't Happen Here".

JOSEPH MacDONALD: To my freshman brother, '43, one well-worn eraser used while studying French, to be found in the ninth crack from the window, 14 feet $6\frac{7}{8}$ inches from where Miss Cronan stands when she teaches the passé composé of the verb "vouloir".

RHETA MARKEY: To junior late-risers, my ability to reach my homeroom seat at exactly 9 minutes, 59 seconds after 8 o'clock.

MONICA McCARTHY: To the next attendance card bearer from 108, my two-minute chats with Grace Martin.

WILLIAM PERRY: To all future orchestra members, my seat next to the mousy violin section. (I don't mean Mickey Mouse, either.)

ROBERT PRATT: To "Sunshine" McGuire, much good luck in order that he may rise above his pre-planned occupation: namely, the W. P. A.

NORMAN SMITH: To the next associate editor of the "Tauntonian", better luck than I had in keeping a straight face at the staff meetings.

JOSEPHINE SOARES: To the 1940 advertising manager, my sincere hope that the depression will be over.

NORMA SURGENS: To Irene Wrigley, $1/5$ of my sense of humor (she already has $4/5$ of her own), the first hook in 123 on which to hang her coat, and permission to giggle in all her classes.

In witness thereof we set our hand and seal,

Reminiscences

We'll never forget . . . Harold Dimond's superb rendition of Tommy Dorsey's theme song at the Hoopsters' Hop . . . Coyle's gift to the ladies, Tommy Dennen . . . those slick Hicks from the sticks, Carl Secher and Bob Eames . . . The Coffee Shop as our local dive until we all decided to go to Leonard's . . . the way we "studied" at the Public Library . . . the excitement and fun of those nerve-wracking Coyle games . . . the friendly relations that existed between the T. H. S. girls and the Coyle boys . . . the bankrupt condition of the Hi-Y . . . the sensational MacLean Midgets . . . Pussy's giggle . . . that February Drill with Duke Oliver . . . the first appearance of the Verse-Speaking Choir . . . Warburton's unappreciated humor . . . Lala's exhausting cheerfulness . . . Freddy O'Neill with a baton . . . Betty Babbitt's imagination when translating the Aeneid . . . Rita's triumphant entry into T. H. S. . . . the protective instinct that Dot Stanton inspires in us all . . . Chief Bob Inman and his squad trying to extinguish the fire in the chemistry store room with a bucket brigade of beakers . . . Ruthie Hoye's nonchalant, "Come again" . . . Muriel Gregg punctuating her Latin translation with laborious sighs . . . Floyd's gift for leadership . . . Harold Ballou's genial friendliness . . . Norma Carr's puny puns . . . Dave Marsden's unconscious ability to make feminine hearts turn over . . . Carl Secher's infrequent visits to his homeroom . . . Jimmy O'Boyle's alibis . . . Joe MacDonald's personal French vocabulary . . . Charlotte Hathaway's effervescence . . . Polly Rogers' self-reliance.

Fond memories of our teachers . . . Miss Atwell's eloquent eyebrows and her reluctant fondness for Eddie McMullen . . . Mr. McManus' vim and vigor . . . Miss Cronan's magnetic smile . . . Mr. Decker's decided views on women's hats and his careful patrol of the cafeteria during recess . . . Mr. Bowman's good nature . . . Miss Sheehan's indulgence of the P. G.'s . . . Mr. Kennedy's overwhelming popularity at the Freshman Party . . . Miss Smith's love of poetry . . . Miss Salthouse's system of homeroom government . . . the Headmaster's good humored quips on his conspicuous absence of hair . . . Mr. Norton's expressive hands . . . Miss Stone, invariably concluding her advance assignments with, "Is that clear?" . . . Miss Nichols' shouting during basketball, "Hold it, keep it, retain it, don't throw it." . . . Miss Fagan's willing chaperonage of dances . . .

Seen around school . . . Taxie's jitterbug antics in that olive green suit . . . Louis Couto's gaudy bow ties . . . Jeanie Van's spontaneous smile . . . Allan Wood's innocent expression . . . Walter Wood's curls . . . Harry Lincoln's suspenders . . . the daily doubles, Merle Ashley escorting Norma Carr up to type every day; Bill Potter escorting Barbara Chace back to her homeroom after type . . . my, isn't type an interesting subject . . . Bob Leonard's expansive grin . . . Harriet Tetlow, our ace prima donna . . . the three "Reds", Metcalf, Pero, and Smith . . . Mabel Braheny talking to Bill . . . Whiz! . . . there goes Ernie Smith . . . Violet-picking dogs.
